1. The recent consolidation of many administrative bodies has forced a number of employees out of work. The rubber and leather trusts, for example, have been combined, and the cotton, silk and wool trusts have merged.
2. On 2 June 1955 the following instructions, relevant to the procedure for discharging employees for the remainder of 1955, were issued:
 - a. Personnel forced out of jobs by a structural change in organization should be given six months' notice of the effective date of dismissal.
 - b. In order that the central labor reserve (Trudovi Rezervi) offices might assist in relocating such personnel, lists were to have been submitted to them no later than 1 September 1955.
 - c. Every employee who chooses to leave Sofia for the provinces is to be guaranteed two months' salary with no deductions, as well as an allowance equivalent to one third of one month's salary for each member of his family. The amount of his terminal pay is to be based on the salary he received during his last three months of employment.
3. These instructions have left many government employees with a feeling of uncertainty about the future.
